Stripping the Wallpaper

Many times, I've heard people refer to "peeling back layers of an onion" as they find new revelations about themselves on their 12-step journey of discovery and recovery in OA. But a new analogy came to me the other day as I was stripping wallpaper in my home. My journey of discovery in the 12-step program has been more like stripping wallpaper than peeling an onion.

Why?

- 1) With an onion, I know positively that the layers exist; but with wallpaper, I have no idea what lies below the visible surface.
- 2) I can cut through an onion and the layers are there for my eyes to see, and even count. Not so for wallpaper.

Recently, on HGTV, one designer gave the 4 steps of stripping wallpaper:

Score

Spray

Sit

Scrape

As I worked my way down the hallway, my mind pondered these words and here is the application I found as they apply to my action plan in this program of recovery.

Score:

With courage, I need to make little openings in my protective wall so that the light of the Spirit may come in and that I might also be open to the help of others.

Spray:

I must saturate my mind and heart with God's love, self love, positive self messages, and the positive words of other trusted people.

Sit:

I must wait and give time for my Higher Power, God, to help so that feelings, behaviors, and character defects can come into the light of day and the light of the Spirit.

Scrape:

I must participate in gentle and patient cleansing so that I find healing without making additional scars on my heart.

My wrongs and defects need to come into the light of day and amends need to be made. This is conviction, which is loving and healing. But scarring is not appropriate, for that is condemnation, which is not loving. Thanks to God and OA, I have the rest of my life to practice the 4-S approach as part of my action plan for recovery. I am blessed and grateful.

Your task is not to seek for love, but merely to seek and find all the barriers within yourself that you have built against it.

If pleasing people were the key to happiness, you would be happy for doing that by now.

Ask Anna Nimity

Dear Anna,

Why do they talk about surrendering in Overeaters Anonymous? Isn't that giving up?
Baffled

Dear Baffled,

You are confusing surrender with submission.

Surrender means acceptance. Surrender means I'm willing to ask for help. Surrender means letting go of the vice grip I have on the steering wheel of my life (which always lands me in the ditch). Surrender means allowing my Higher Power to work through me.

Yours in service,
Anna
